

Your Words Are Very Valuable

Talking is a natural action of a human being. Everyone keeps talking but only sensible people are able to keep quiet. Some people's words become like treasures and inspirations for others. Other's words pull people out of helpless situations and give them courage. But there are few people, whose words give sorrow to others, make them helpless, take away their happiness and throw them in the storm of stress.

Ordinary people do not know the value to their words. They just speak, not knowing what to say, where to talk, how much to talk and when to keep silent. Sometimes, even after talking a lot, a person is unable to convey the meaning clearly, and that person cannot be called sensible. But the one, who speaks with clarity and uses few words, is a sensible person. Our physical and mental energy is wasted in excess talking, resulting in that the person cannot inculcate anything and cannot stabilise their intellect anywhere. Those in the teaching profession may have observed that after hours of sessions, a teacher feels mentally tired. If anyone wishes to become a scholar in any field, he/she should talk less.

Our words should be such that others feel happy on listening to us and not feel like running away. A person who tends to speak less gets more importance and it also a sign of being intellectual. Sweet words can give the taste of a melody. Words full of respect, regard and love can increase love and unity among family members, and end disputes.

Pay attention that when you are talking to your children or any outsider, your children are constantly learning from you and they will use the same language with others. Never say things that will hurt the children. Even if they are not behaving well or not smart, you have to bring enthusiasm and courage in them with your words. If you keep telling them they are unfit and dull, these words will definitely have adverse effects on their mind and intellect and make them duller.

If someone is struck with some chronic disease in your house, you should console and support them in such a condition. Never curse their bad luck and keep saying, "My entire savings are gone because of this disease." No one has control over any disease, but instead if you speak sweetly with them, they may recover sooner.

You are inviting repentance in the end, by getting angry with someone and using bad language. Everyone knows that words once spoken cannot be taken back. Words can make enemies and friends as well, and it up to us whether we want to increase the number of enemies or friends we have. So first assess and then speak. Even if something makes you angry, control your language and this will save you from many difficult situations. Nothing is spent by talking sweet words, so why don't we use the language which will give happiness to others and increase our elevated treasure. If you want to create an elevated personality for yourself, if you want to become famous, if you want people to love you, then make your speech sweet.

Your high-grade words will increase your respect in society and if you keep using waste talk, then people will quickly lower your value. So learn how to talk. Remember one small proverb – Speak in the way you would like to hear from others. What will be your reaction if others use foul language with you, or lie to you? Realising this, extract goodness from bad dealings as well.

Come, let us take a pledge to talk sweetly. Give importance to each of your words, then your controlled words will free you from many disputes and irritations. Make your family and household environment loving, through your clean and sweet language. Your words should be so inspiring that it should be difficult to forget them. Your words should reflect your personality and those with sweet words become elevated human beings and act as a guide for many others.
